Join the California Center for Sustainable Energy for this free, two-day event focusing on healthier, more sustainable lifestyles. Sustainability Fair 2009 is the place to learn about reducing your carbon footprint, lowering your energy costs and curbing waste and water consumption. The fair features displays, exhibits and workshops presented by industry experts.

Thursday, August 6, is for business and commercial participants who want to know more about sustainable and eco-friendly products, services and practices that can reduce energy costs and waste in the workplace.

Sunday, August 9, focuses on information and resources for residents and homeowners who want to learn about green and renewable technologies and discover more about what it means to live sustainably while saving money.
